Angel Yin shot a blemish-free final round to win the LPGA Thailand tournament by a stroke from a fast-finishing Akie Iwai of Japan and claim her second tour title. The 26-year-old American made seven birdies — and no bogeys — for a four-round total of 28-under 260 at Siam Country Club's Pattaya Old Course, which was enough to hold off Iwai despite her 61 being the lowest score of the day. It is the California native's second LPGA title after winning the Buick LPGA Shanghai in 2023. She is a two-time major runner-up — at the 2023 Chevron Championship and the 2019 U.S. Women's Open. Yin's best finish in four previous appearances at LPGA Thailand was a share of third place in 2021.

Advani's victory in Doha adds to an already staggering list of accolades. MAKING A DECISION

Geraint Thomas, the former Tour de France champion who also won gold medals in track cycling for Great Britain at the Olympic Games in 2008 and 2012, announced that this will be his final year as a professional. "I think now the decision is official, you do start to reflect because when you're in it, it's just one thing after the next, year after year, so you don't really appreciate it," he said. ^{AP}
