

HENRY'S ABSENCE

India's quest for a maiden ICC tournament final win over New Zealand received a major boost when Kiwi pace ace Henry was ruled out of the match, following a shoulder injury he sustained while fielding in the semifinal.

Despite missing the final, Henry finished the tournament as the highest wicket-taker. His success was based on his ability to zone in on the right line and length — 20.8 per cent of his deliveries were projected to hit the stumps, the second highest for any pacer in the competition.

Henry was New Zealand's best bet against India's vaunted top-order, having scythed through it earlier in the tournament with a fifer. Indian fans also won't forget his early burst in the 2019 ODI World Cup semifinal, which took the game away from India.

In Henry's absence, the Black Caps pace attack wilted as Rohit dazzled. Kyle Jamieson was viciously pulled away for a six in the first over, while Nathan Smith was smacked out of the attack after conceding 22 runs in his two overs. Will O'Rourke's ineptness in the death overs made it easier for India to tick off the chase.
