

one of the two, Holloway gestured to Gaethje to come to the middle of the ring, which looked borderline taunting, and the latter agreed.

Holloway then saw an opening and dished out the right hand on Gaethje's jaw, knocking him out cold, with the crowd gasping in disbelief. The bout was adjudged Fight of the Night, deservedly.

Dricus du Plessis rattles haters

South Africa's Dricus du Plessis is one of the few UFC fighters to get a shot at the title pretty early in his career. He was just six fights old when he challenged for the title. 'Stillknocks' beat Sean Strickland in the first numbered event of the year.

His post-fight comments about his ethnicity sparked widespread debates across the world, and Israel Adesanya joined the party. The online feud between the two was one of the most talked-about aspects of UFC 2024 and culminated in a title fight six months later. With a point to prove, both fighters entered the ring with fire in their eyes and the middleweight title on the line.

Du Plessis started off on the back foot, receiving a lot more punches than he would've liked. However, a right hook to the side of Adesanya's head in the fourth round gave Du Plessis the much-needed impetus as he swiftly got the takedown, which forced the Nigerian-born New Zealander to tap out.

Puja Tomar: One of a kind

Uttar Pradesh's Puja Tomar created history as she became the first-ever Indian to win a fight in the Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC). She defeated Rayanne Dos Santos of Brazil by a split decision of 30-27, 27-30, and 29-28 in the women's strawweight division at UFC Louisville 2024 in June.

Puja and Dos Santos went all three rounds: 15 minutes of gruelling, fast-paced, back-and-forth action.

Santos used her height advantage and range to dictate the action, but Tomar went kicking and screaming to the final bell, causing damage in the process.

The 'Cyclone' already has another fight in the UFC lined up. She will take on Shauna Bannon of Ireland, who is a budding talent as well. Bannon made her promotional debut in 2023 and has won one out of her two fights.
