

Decisive: Manchester City's Phil Foden scored his team's third goal in the 87th minute to end any hopes of a Chelsea comeback. GETTYIMAGES

Aneesh Dey & Joan Mathew Jacob aneesh.dey@thehindu.co.in, joan.mathew@thehindu.co.in Manchester City's new centre-back, Abdukodir Khusanov, had a torrid start to his life in Manchester, making an early mistake that led to Chelsea's opening goal. In the third minute, Khusanov attempted to head the ball back to his keeper, Ederson, but barely made contact, allowing Jackson to pounce on the loose ball and square it to Noni Madueke, who slotted it into the open net.

Pep Guardiola's side found an equaliser in the 42nd minute through Josko Gvardiol, who lashed the ball into an open net after Chelsea keeper Robert Sanchez made the initial save off a Matheus Nunes shot.

Sanchez, who could do little to prevent the first goal, turned into his own worst enemy for City's second. In the 68th minute, in a horrendous lapse of judgement, he rushed to the edge of his box to clear the ball. Realising