

Rising Stars: India's Next Generation of Esports Athletes Take the Spotlight

Looking back at 2024, Indian esports has made significant strides, fueled by structured pathways and impactful community-building initiatives by Riot Games.

This year, India's competitive gaming scene reached new heights, with local talent advancing on the global stage. A defining moment was Revenant Esports' thrilling run at the VALORANT Champions Tour Ascension Pacific 2024 tournament in September, marking a pivotal chapter for Indian esports.

This wasn't just another tournament; VCT Ascension Pacific is where the best of the best in the Asia-Pacific region clash. Revenant Esports, one of India's premier VALORANT teams, went head-to-head with powerhouse teams from Japan, Korea, and Southeast Asia, proving that Indian gamers can hold their own against international competition. Organized by Riot Games, the VALORANT Champions Tour (VCT) has provided a structured pathway for Indian teams to climb the competitive ladder.

Riot Games' role in Indian esports goes beyond major tournaments. Through regional competitions like the VALORANT Challengers South Asia, the company has laid the foundation for a vibrant and competitive scene across India. It's not just about the big leagues; Riot Games has actively supported local initiatives, nurturing talent from the ground up and fostering a sense of community and opportunity for aspiring gamers nationwide.

Arun Rajappa, Country Manager, India & South Asia at Riot Games, said: "The passion and enthusiasm within the Indian gaming community are evident. With a large and diverse player base, India holds immense potential for growth and development in the gaming sector. "We're looking to work with everyone in the ecosystem to shape the growth of this market".

The VALORANT Champions Tour

Harsh Khelraay at VCT Ascension Pacific Jakarta 2024.

Sin Prisa Gaming wins the trophy at VCT Ascension Pacific Jakarta 2024.

