Bayern Munich dropped its first points of the season after playing out a 1-1 draw against defending champion Bayer Leverkusen (above). First-half strikes from Robert Andrich and Aleksander Pavlovic ensured that Vincent Kompany and Xabi Alonso's men shared the spoils in the heavyweight clash.

After being shocked by Aston Villa in the Champions League during midweek, the league leader went on to drop two more points, after Eintracht Frankfurt's Omar Marmoush grabbed a stoppage-time equaliser to hold the German giant to a thrilling 3-3 draw.

Leverkusen, on the other hand, squandered a two-goal lead and was held to a 2-2 draw by newly-promoted Holstein Kiel, leaving the champion fifth in the table with 11 points, three points off league leader Bayern.

Days after its historic 7-1 demolition of Celtic in the Champions League, Borussia Dortmund slumped to a 2-1 loss against Union Berlin. Nuri Sahin's men are now seventh in the standings with 10 points from six games. Apart from Bayern, RB Leipzig is the only unbeaten side in the league so far, with a win against FC Heidenheim bringing it up to second in the table, level on points with the leader.
