

IN THE RECORD BOOKS

Shafali Verma became only the second Indian woman to score a Test double ton after Mithali Raj.

Her double century is the fastest by a woman (194 balls) and her 292-run stand with Smriti Mandhana is the highest opening stand in women's Tests.

India has now won all three Tests it has played under Harmanpreet Kaur's captaincy.

She is now India's joint most successful captain for India, alongside Mithali who has as many wins.

Laura Wolvaardt became the third woman after England's Heather Knight and Tammy Beaumont to register a century in all three formats of the game.

She is the first to do so in a calendar year.

India's score of 525/4 on Day 1 is the most runs scored by any team in a single's day play in Test history.

Moreover, the eventual score of 603/6d in the first innings is the highest team total in the history of women's Tests.

Duckworth passes away

Frank Duckworth, co-inventor of the Duckworth-Lewis method for calculating target scores in limited-overs cricket hit by bad weather, died at the age of 84. Duckworth, along with his fellow statistician Tony Lewis, came up with the formula which was officially adopted by the International Cricket Council (ICC) in 1999. It was first used in the second match of England's one-day series against Zimbabwe in 1999. The method was renamed the Duckworth-Lewis-Stern (DLS) method after it was slightly modified by Australian statistician Steven Stern.

Most runs conceded in an over

England seamer Ollie Robinson gave away 43 runs in an over during a County Championship match, and became the record-holder for bowling the second-costliest over in First-Class cricket history. The 30-year-old was playing for Sussex against Leicestershire in a Division Two match. The figures from Robinson's 13th over in the game read: 6, 6nb, 4, 6, 4, 6nb, 4, 6nb, 1. He also set the record for most runs conceded by an English bowler, surpassing former Test pacer Alex Tudor's 38-run over.
