

FUNCTIONS

Functions allow you to define a set of actions and then repeat that set of actions at any time by calling the function name in your code. When creating a function, you can specify exactly the information it needs to do its work, and your function can return exactly the values you need it to.

Using functions will help you write code that is well organized, concise, and easy to build upon.