DROSTE MAKER

The Droste effect is a recursive art technique named after a 1904 illustration on a tin of Droste's Cacao, a Dutch brand of cocoa. Shown in Figure 14-1, the tin features an image of a nurse holding a meal tray containing a tin of Droste cocoa, which itself bears the illustration.

In this chapter we'll create a Droste Maker program that can generate similar recursive images from any photograph or drawing you have, whether it be a museum patron looking at an exhibit of themselves, a cat in front of a computer monitor of a cat in front of a computer monitor, or something else entirely.
