The Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC) is set to light up the T-Mobile Arena in Nevada on October 5 with UFC 320, one of the year's most anticipated events. The headliner sees reigning light heavyweight champion Magomed

Ankalaev defend his crown against former title holder Alex Pereira in a fascinating rematch.

At UFC 313 earlier this year, Ankalaev leaned on his grappling-heavy game to nullify Pereira's striking and claim a dominant unanimous decision win.

His formula was simple yet ruthless: time his takedowns, drag Pereira into close quarters, and sap him of energy until resistance waned.

That blueprint worked once, but rematches are rarely identical. Pereira, a two-division champion and one of the most dangerous strikers in
