

Shubman Gill in elite list

754 } The number of runs Shubman Gill made in the five-match Test series against England. This is the second-highest by any captain in Test cricket history. Only Australian Don Bradman, like Gill, also appeared in the maiden Test series as captain in the Ashes series of 1936-37, and made more runs — 810. The fourth captain listed in the table below, Sunil Gavaskar, too, was in his first series as a full-time captain. However, Gill's aggregate is now the highest in a Test series by any visiting captain. Meanwhile, Gill became only the third captain in Tests to register four centuries in a series after Bradman (v India in 1947-48) and Gavaskar (v West Indies in 1978/79).

+ first series as captain

Gill (754 runs) becomes the 16th batter to aggregate 750+ runs in a Test series, and overall, he provided the 21st such instance in all Test cricket, with Don Bradman doing it four times, while Brian Lara and Steve Smith did it twice. Among Indians, only Gavaskar (774 in WI in 1971 in four Tests) has achieved this in a Test series.

4 } The number of Test centuries for Yashasvi Jaiswal against England before reaching the age of 24 years. Jaiswal joins a special group led by Don Bradman, who has six centuries, while joining George Headley and Sachin Tendulkar, who have each scored four centuries against England before the age of 24. For the record, Garry Sobers and Mohd. Azharuddin have three centuries against this opponent before the age of 24. Meanwhile, Jaiswal (1123) is only the third batter to aggregate 1000 Test runs against England before the age of 24. Only Bradman (1442) has more runs, while Sobers has 1069 runs. The second table has the details.
