

3} The number of Indian nightwatchmen to register a fifty-plus score in Test cricket. Akash Deep's 66 against England while batting at the #4 position after coming in just before close on the second day of the fifth Test is the second-highest score by an Indian nightwatchman. Two others, Chetan Sharma (54) and Amit Mishra, twice (50 and 84) have done this for India.

8} The number of occasions, India was able to cross totals of 350+ in the recent series in England. This tally is now the most by any Test side in a series. The previous record was held by Australia, when it crossed these totals six times in a series on three separate occasions.

Additionally, the just-concluded series has also seen 14 occasions where totals of 350-plus have been breached by both sides. This is a new Test record, surpassing the previous record of 10 set twice during the Ashes series of 1928/29 and 1948. India, meanwhile, became the fourth side in Test cricket to register eight totals of 300-plus. The feat, achieved in the recent series against England, equals the Test record held by Australia (v SA, 1910/11), England (v Aus, 1928/29), and Australia (v WI, 1975/76) — all in Australia.

350-plus totals by a side in a Test series

350+	Team	Opp	H/A	Series	M	Result
