While England women clinched top honours in Europe, Nigeria's Super Falcons (above) reclaimed its title as the queen of the African continent after securing a record-extending 10th Women's Africa Cup of Nations trophy. The team, however, was made to work hard by host Morocco in the final, which took a two-goal lead after captain Ghizlane Chebbak and winger Sanaa Mssoudy scored within the first 30 minutes.

Nigeria's comeback began when Esther Okoronkwo and Folashade Ijamusi scored seven minutes apart, before Jennifer Echegini slotted in a dramatic 88th-minute winner.

Elsewhere in South America, the race for the Copa America Femenina entered its final stretch. Argentina, which had the best record in the group stage with four wins from four, crashed out in the semifinals after a penalty shootout loss to Colombia (the match ended goalless in regulation time). With the win, Colombia not only reached the final but also booked a spot at the LA 2028 Olympics. In the final, it will face either defending champion Brazil or Uruguay, who meet in the second semifinal.

Preparations underway for new season

Liverpool's intent to go for the full haul of trophies next season was clearly evident in its activity during the summer transfer window. The club has spent £269 million so far, bringing in the likes of Florian Wirtz, Hugo Ekitike, Jeremie Frimpong, and Milos Kerkez. In addition, the club has been heavily linked with Newcastle United's Alexander Isak, who is reportedly looking to move this summer.

However, the Premier League champion suffered a 4-2 defeat to AC Milan in their pre-season friendly at the Hong Kong Football Festival. Newcastle, meanwhile, travelled to Asia without Isak and fell to a 3-2 loss against Arsenal in their friendly. The match also gave Arsenal the opportunity to unveil Swedish striker Viktor Gyokeres as its newest player.

Manchester United, meanwhile, confirmed the signing of Bryan Mbeumo from Brentford, having earlier strengthened its attack with the
