

Under CM Nitish Kumar's direct supervision and persistent vision, Bihar emerged not only as a host but as a bold claimant to future leadership in India's evolving sporting ecosystem.

To host major events and provide elite training opportunities, the government is building international-grade sports facilities in all divisional headquarters. These include synthetic athletic tracks, indoor arenas, modern swimming pools, and hockey turfs that comply with global standards.

longer an elite activity but a mass movement.

Residential Training: The Eklavya Sports Centres

For young athletes who show exceptional promise, the state is setting up residential training centres based on the Eklavya model. These centres identify talented boys and girls from government schools and provide them with a complete support system.

This includes scientifically designed training programs, balanced and nutritious meals, modern sports equipment, and
