

academic education. By combining education and sports in one cohesive environment, these centres aim to groom the next generation of elite athletes in a holistic manner.

This model mirrors the best international practices where athletes are identified early, trained systematically, and supported emotionally and financially throughout their journey. With such an infrastructure, Bihar is taking a bold step toward professionalising its sports ecosystem.

Recognition and Rewards: National Sports Day Celebrations

Every year, on August 29, Bihar celebrates National Sports Day with a grand honour ceremony that recognises athletes who have brought glory to the state.

The Chief Minister personally acknowledges those who have won medals at national-level competitions, awarding them with trophies, certificates, and financial rewards.

One of the strongest testaments to the seriousness of the scheme is the government's decision to offer jobs to successful athletes. To date, 367 talented sportspersons have been given government jobs based on their achievements.

This formal recognition plays a vital role in raising the status of sports in society. It motivates young athletes to strive for excellence and gives them a platform to showcase their achievements. More importantly, it signals to families and communities that sports is not just an extracurricular activity — it is a profession worthy of respect and investment.

Creating Careers in Sports

One of the strongest testaments to the seriousness of the scheme is the government's decision to offer jobs to successful athletes. To date, 367 talented sportspersons have been given government jobs based on their achievements. This is more than just an employment drive — it's a policy that connects performance with livelihood, offering athletes long-term security. It sends a powerful message: if you work hard and represent your state or country, you will be rewarded not just with applause, but with opportunities for a stable life.

Building Global-Standard Sports Infrastructure

To host major events and provide elite training opportunities, the government is building international-grade sports facilities in all divisional headquarters. These include synthetic athletic tracks, indoor arenas, modern swimming pools, and hockey turfs that comply with global standards.

Such infrastructure will not only raise the quality of training but also allow Bihar to host national and international events in the future. It represents a key step in positioning the state as a sports destination, attracting investments, media
