

SAI Centre Bengaluru the go-to venue for Indian athletes seeking world-class facilities

From a modest training base with limited facilities to a key hub responsible for implementing all SAI schemes across three states and housing National Centres of Excellence (NCOEs) for hockey, athletics, and volleyball, the Netaji Subhash Southern Centre has emerged as a go-to destination for athletes seeking world-class facilities at home.

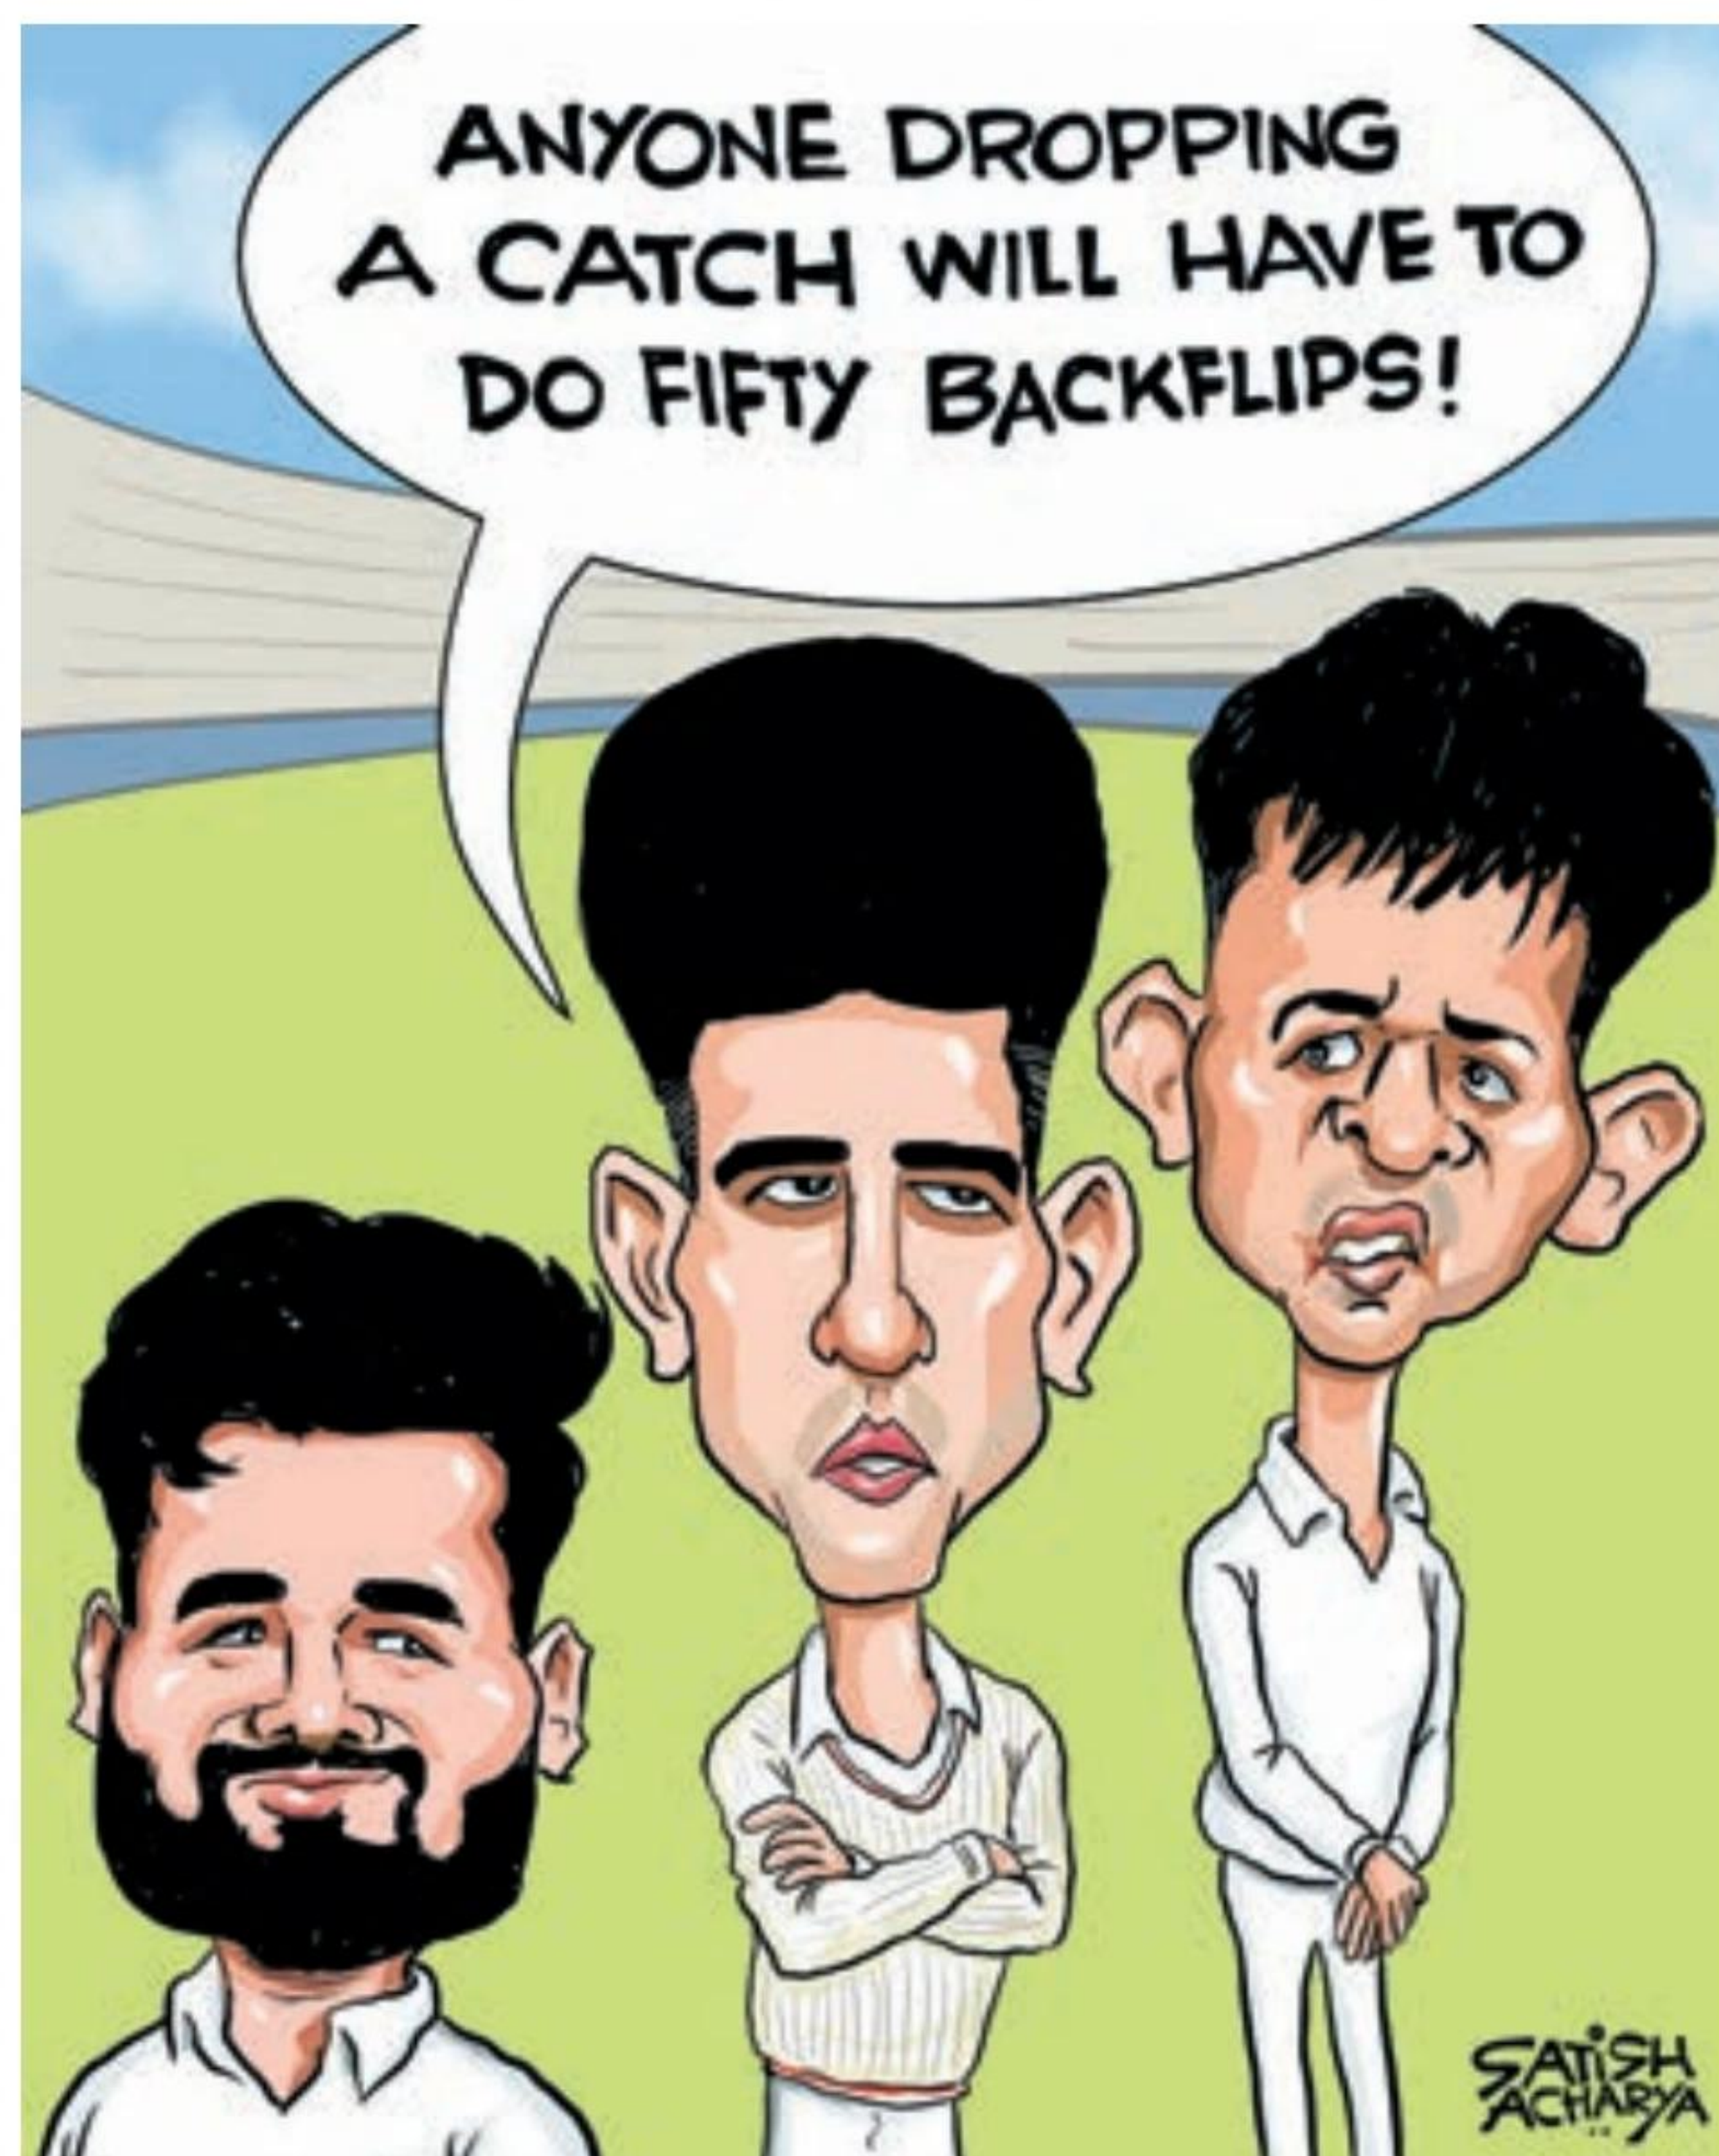

With cumulative investments exceeding INR 140 crore, the Sports Authority of India's Southern Centre has undergone a major transformation over the past decade. In addition to the three NCOEs offering comprehensive training across age groups, the centre also hosts national camps in table tennis, kabaddi, and water polo, and runs academic programmes across 11 disciplines.

The centre has a state-of-the-art sports science centre with labs for biomechanics, sports medicine and sports psychology equipped with some of the latest testing and training machines from across the world. Out in the field, the athletics stadium boasts a smart track with sensors that can gather and analyse data of every stride, an exclusive strength and conditioning area, a recovery room and modern changing rooms for hockey.

2 The Athletics Federation of India (AFI) has set a July 31 deadline for mandatory registration of all the coaches — qualified and unqualified — in the country in its bid to tackle spiralling doping cases, making it clear that non-compliance with the directive will lead to their blacklisting. In its latest circular, following its decision in the January Annual General Body Meeting (AGM) to crack the whip on coaches suspected to be involved in doping of their wards, the AFI said that unregistered coaches, regardless of their qualifications, will not be permitted to impart training to athletes.
