

SHASHI SHEKHAR KASHYAP

there, and I believe the crowds will be bigger than usual. People will see buses of athletes, flags from around the world, and the level of competition. That exposure can inspire young athletes and spread awareness of our sport.

In training, I'm adjusting for peak performance. Off-season, my weight work is about lifting heavy and slow. But as competition nears, I shift to speed. Because of my disability, it's never straightforward. My legs are different lengths, so I balance my left foot on two weight plates to even things out. Still, the pressure on my spine is constant, and balance remains tricky.

Right now, I'm doing snatch lifts of 60kg, bench presses of 85kg, and squats of 120kg — sometimes even