

FLEUR JONG

(Netherlands)

Jong, a three-time Paralympic gold medallist, has been a consistent performer in both long jump and sprints.

She was dealt a cruel blow a few days before her 17th birthday when a bacterial infection caused blood flow to her toes and her fingers to stop, which led to the amputation of most of her fingers and legs.

Jong, 29, will be taking part in her sixth World Championships and will be primed to add to her four gold medals in the long jump T64 and 100m T64.

She has set multiple world records over the years, the latest coming in 2025 in both the 100m T62 and long jump T62 events.

SHI YITING

(China)

Shi Yiting is another dominant track-and-field para athlete across multiple Paralympics and World Championships.

She is classified under T-36 due to impaired muscle movement in her left arm and unequal leg lengths caused by cerebral palsy. The 27-year-old will have her eyes set on clinching a fifth straight gold medal in the 100m. She retained her crown in Kobe last year by shattering her own world record with a time of 13.35s.

She also has five Paralympic gold medals in the 100m T-36 and 200m T-36. Under the right conditions, Yiting will be tipped to win gold with another record-breaking time.
