

From village dust to the bright lights of the PKL

From the dust of Pahladpur to the glare of the Pro Kabaddi League, Yogesh Dahiya stands as its calmest and most unexpected star.

Saikat Chakraborty

saikat.chakraborty@thehindu.co.in

In the Pro Kabaddi League (PKL), raiders usually hog the headlines. But during the frenzy of the PKL 12 auction, it was a right-corner defender who stole the show. Bengaluru Bulls signed Yogesh Dahiya for a record-breaking ₹1.125 crore, briefly making him the most expensive Indian defender in the league's history. Ankit Jaglan later went for ₹1.573 crore.

After a tense three-way bidding war, the final gavel drop sent Yogesh's family into raucous celebration — the kind where disbelief and pride collide. "My family was very happy. They were so happy that their child had become so valuable," Yogesh told Sportstar.

Known as a "silent killer", Yogesh's rise has been built not on flamboyance but on quiet, calculated precision. His defensive creed is

Pics: PKL MEDIA