The recently concluded UFC (Ultimate Fighting Championship) Fight Night's main event was wrapped up with an intense five-round showdown between veteran Rose Namajunas and Amanda Ribas in a flyweight bout.

After a full 25 minutes, the judges unanimously declared former strawweight champion Namajunas the winner, breaking her two-fight losing streak and solidifying her position as a title contender in the flyweight division.

The headlining duo ran fairly level throughout, especially on the feet, with neither Namajunas nor Ribas delivering any decisive blows, but each piling up quality lands throughout. On the mat, Namajunas was able to gain the upper hand for the majority of the fight, stifling Ribas' attempts to create openers and landing short blows.

Meanwhile, in the heavyweight co-main event, Karl Williams kept his winning run intact as he earned a unanimous decision win over Justin Tafa, who suffered his first loss in three years.

Tafa displayed greater explosiveness, consistently landing hits on Williams throughout the fight. However, Williams managed to close the distance and take Tafa to the ground, where he controlled the match by landing effective short strikes and maintaining dominant positions.
