

Target locked and loaded as Mission Paris looms

Indian shooters are world-class, no doubt, but they would need strategic preparation for success at the Paris Olympics.

Kamesh Srinivasan
srinivasan.k@thehindu.co.in Indian shooting is on the verge of making a big impact on the world stage. The country has a large and talented pool of athletes who have received training and support from the government. In addition, each squad is backed by a team of experts who work tirelessly to ensure that the athletes perform their best when it matters most.

Two points give a fair indication of things to follow in Paris. The first is the number of Olympic quota places Indian shooters have been able to bag so far, with one more qualification event yet to be done. India has won 19 Olympic quota places out of a maximum possible 24.