World Boxing will seek recognition from Olympic organisers to replace the Russian-led International Boxing Association and keep the troubled sport on the programme for the 2028 Los Angeles Games, the fledgling body said.

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) stripped the IBA of recognition last June after saying it had failed to complete reforms on governance, finance, and ethical issues.

The boxing tournaments at the Paris Games are being organised by the IOC, but sports director Kit McConnell (in pic) said that the Executive Board had stressed that the situation could not continue.

“This must be the last time that such a process can be undertaken by the IOC,” he said.

“If there is no boxing body supported and driven by the National Federations, we will not be in a position to include boxing in the Olympic programme.”

Olympic chiefs announced that Russian and Belarusian athletes competing in this summer’s Paris Games under a neutral flag will not be able to take part in the opening ceremony. Athletes from both countries had already been banned from attending the opening ceremony of the Paralympics, a little more than two weeks after the Olympics finish.

In December, the IOC suspended Russia from the Paris 2024 Olympics, but gave the green light for Russian and Belarusian athletes to compete as neutrals.

NOT GUILTY!

British sprinter Victoria Ohuruogu said that she had been cleared of an anti-doping violation relating to an alleged prohibited association with a banned athlete. Ohuruogu was allegedly being coached by her Italian boyfriend, Antonio Infantino, whose three-year doping ban ends in December, but this was dismissed by a UK Anti-Doping panel. “An independent panel has emphatically dismissed the charge of prohibited association against me, finding that it was ‘not satisfied, let alone comfortably satisfied’ that I have broken any rules,” Ohuruogu said.
